MEMORIAL DAY IS MADE MEMORABLE BY FINE PROGRAM

ity in behalf of the oppressed Cubans, and introduced Capt. J. L. B. Alexander, commander of the Phoenix camp of the Spanish War veterans. Captain Alexander spoke as follows:

Captain Alexander's Address
Comrades and Friends:
We are assembled here today to do honor and pay tribute to the memory of our heroic dead.
The observance of Memorial Day among our countrymen was originally designed by a grateful people as the day upon which the loyal sons and daughters of America should meet in every city, town and hamlet of our land, on each recurring year, to recall the valor and sacrifices of the patriots who have given their all in our civil war the flag might float over a united and happy people, and the observance of the day therefore fittingly and properly committed to the patriotic men who served in that great war and preserved the unity of our nation; and as time moved on, it became necessary and essential for our people to observe and take in other wars in order to preserve and safeguard the principles and ideals upon which our nation is founded, the assurance of every individual of life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, equality and justice and to make it possible and convenient for other peoples to enjoy the same principles and ideals. Therefore, by common and united consent, the observance of Memorial Day has become nationwide, and all our ordinary care and life and gather under the protecting folds of our common flag to observe the day and pay their grateful tribute and respect to the memory of the American heroes that lie beneath the sod in home and in foreign lands.

Brings to Mind Sacrifices
The observance of Memorial Day at this time when we are in the midst of the greatest conflict the world has ever known, brings to our minds more forcibly the realization of the true patriotism and loyalty of the nation's life and the sacrifices that our brave soldiers and sailor boys are making at home and in foreign lands and to safeguard the welfare of our people from foreign foes and to supplant autocracy with democracy and secure peace for all peoples of the face of the earth.

Spanish War Tribute Paid
Primarily, today we do honor to the Civil War veterans and with reverence we hold in memory those of these veterans who have passed to the beyond, for they were the saviors of our country, and though the Spanish war was not as long as the Civil war, nor the sacrifices of those who served in that conflict as great, yet the services and triumphs of these veterans are gratefully appreciated by our countrymen, and the memory of the men in that war who are no more will always be kept fresh in the minds and hearts of our people. And we also do honor to our boys who are engaged in the present world's war, at home and across the seas, and will cheer the brave men of those who are struggling to win the war of them who have given up their lives to safeguard our nation and make democracy safe. And we honor, respect and hold in the highest esteem the brave men of the present war, these boys, for the loyalty and patriotism they have shown and the sacrifices they have made.

Determined to Win War
The American people should congratulate themselves on the united and patriotic spirit which exists and prevails among them and on their whole-hearted support to our men and in their determination to win the war. It is the duty of every loyal American citizen, whether native or foreign born, to stand behind our boys in the ranks and behind our president, and render them and him every assistance and encouragement to prosecute the war to final victory, to make democracy safe, and to bring lasting peace to the peoples of the world. It is also our duty to support all constituted authority of state and nation by according due respect and assistance to all officers in the discharge of their duty. This is no time for carping or political criticism, for if we are to win this war, we must stand together as one. We must not permit selfish motives to divert us one from our common goal as loyal citizens to see the war fought to a finish and to victory. Those who indulge in uncalculated and unwarranted criticism should be ashamed among those giving aid and comfort to the enemy of our country, and scorned.

No Self-Aggrandizement
We are not fighting for self-aggrandizement nor to conquer, nor for material gain or advantage over other people, but for self-preservation and to make it safe for other nations, to bring lasting peace and the same privileges, rights and liberties that we enjoy.

We know there is a just God, who watches over the destinies of nations and we humbly and reverently pray to Him to give us the light and strength to succeed in this world's war, to end the devastating and barbarous conflict and bring everlasting peace to the peoples of the world. With patience, united effort, our man-power and our inexhaustible resources, and with justice on our side, no one need have doubts of our final victory. In the meantime, let us be one for one and all for one, united and inseparable.

Fly Over Loyal People
This Memorial Day is the true patriot's day of the nation. Today, wherever old glory holds dominion, a loyal people, grateful for services rendered, unite to honor their heroic dead. Today our children are taught to love the flag and all for which it stands. Today the patriots of the republic give thanks to God for the manifold blessings which He has granted our people, and consecrate themselves anew to the great task of preserving these blessings and transmitting them unimpaired to posterity.

envelops all departed comrades in arms of the republic, tenderly enfolding the dead of all our wars alike. Fitting it is that the graves of these men who sleep beneath the flag of our united country should be decked with flowers and marked by the starry emblem of the nation. It is also fitting that in these remembrances all honor should be given to the great country of noble women who in every trying period of the nation's history have bravely suffered and sacrificed and in countless ways have assisted in moulding and shaping our country's destiny.

Day Grows in Meaning

With the passage of years, Memorial day has had an increasing depth of meaning to us all. Its mantle enfolds the comrades departed who so faithfully served in the cause of liberty, and in the providence of God, our portion will be with them. Entwined with the memories of our dead, which are quickened by these yearly gatherings, are the recollections of other national days and of the prayer and the earnest words and the deep sorrows which have brought us nearer to them in the past and help at this time to give our communion closer and to find our hearts with more tender sympathy for those bereaved who are bowed in mourning and affliction.

Conspicuous in the close of Memorial day we have returned to our homes, it must be that the consecrated thought of this hour shall abide with us and inspire us with a better patriotism and a firmer resolve to give loving aid and sympathy to comrades living and to those left under our care and protection. In times of peace, we are called upon to perform the duties of citizenship as high and holy as those rendered with the colors. Let us battle for the right in civic affairs and champion every cause and endeavor, whose purpose is to give to our country the best of us, and to our power to defend our flag and maintain the liberty of the republic and thus in the highest degree seek to fulfill the patriotic duty of every citizen to his country.

The Indian school band rendered music appropriate to the occasion and restful and inspiring to the large audience.

Judge A. C. Baker was then introduced as one who had worn the gray in the great civil strife, and spoke as follows:

I have been introduced as a former Confederate soldier. That fact needs no explanation. I am a native son and memory of the soldier dead, I make no invidious distinction between the one who fell in front of me, and the one who fell at my side. The glory of the one is as great as the glory of the other. I am proud to say that I have two sons in the United States army. I am in no different category from thousands of other former Confederate soldiers who are now in the United States army. We are making the supreme sacrifice that any man can make aside from dying himself on the battlefield. My sons will go over the top in this great war with God and humanity, side by side with the sons of those who wore the blue.

The great civil war has long since ended and passed away—the great armies have been disbanded, their tents and their camps have been put out, their muster rolls laid away.

Spirits of Heroic Dead
But there is another army, whose numbers no presidential proclamation can reduce, and no general order can disband. This is the army of the disembodied spirits of the heroic dead. They come back from their homes beyond the stars to live with us this day, as we regard their graves. I see them now, a mighty host, more than I can number as I walk the earth. Some are dressed in blue, and some are dressed in gray, and some are dressed in khaki, born of the loins of the blue and the gray.

On earth they varied in character like other men. They had their strength, and their weaknesses; their merits and their faults. Yet, now, all stains are washed away. Their lives are sanctified by the death they have given. A wonderful purifier is death! They died for their country, and found the way to heaven equally short wherever they fell.

There is a beautiful legend as follows:

The Touch of Angels
Just before every battle two angels pass over the camp in the darkness, while the soldiers are asleep, and select the valiant who are to fall in the conflict and mark them with honor. By the story in the legend, all who may thus fall in battle are immortal. They receive their reward in a happy home beyond the sun and the lasting honor of their people.

And so, these disembodied heroic spirits fall as in the legend touched by the angel as doubly immortal. From the early ages till the present time the brave have ever been honored with monuments. The Egyptians spent millions to build the Pyramids by the labor of slaves, in honor of kings, and filled the vacant chambers with portraits of leaders, so that the deeds of bravery might be lasting and perpetual. But such a monument loses its significance with the decay of the people that erected it. This country great as it is, enduring as it is, the everlasting monument of our heroic dead.

Not Dead but Sleeping
O, glorious and immortal dead! We lay for a season thy precious dust beneath the soil that we and cherish thee, but we fling back against our brightening sky the thoughtless speech that calls thee dead. God reigns and His purpose lives, and though your brave lips are silent here, the seeds of glory did you bring up and bring to patriots through the years to come, who shall perpetuate that spirit in a race of noble men.

There is only one kind of peace for us now. We shall have no peace for smells of sauerkraut. We have no love in our hearts for the world and submit nations to his cowardly action. He's wrong and I have the right to hate wrong. Therefore, I hate the German.

And who could die a more glorious, sacred death than fighting under the folds of Old Glory?

Egyptians build the Pyramids as a monument to their dead. Even a greater monument have the heroes of this nation builded, for their monument is America—perpetual and everlasting America.

In this, the hour of our country's need, I invoke the shades of these immortal heroes, and conjure them to kindle in the minds and hearts of this people a fire of divine patriotism.

Gettysburg Address Read
Following Judge Baker's address, Mrs. C. M. Etter of the Woman's Relief Corps read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Ritualistic exercises by the Woman's Relief Corps, consisting of decorating a monument with flowers to the unknown dead, were then conducted. The Spanish War auxiliary had some ritualistic exercises and a speech at the foot of the monument and made some fitting remarks in memory of Colonel Brodie, a former member, who was recently called to the great beyond.

The audience then joined in singing the "The Star Spangled Banner," after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. A. Wallis. The various organizations then adjourned to the various cemeteries, where the graves of over 300 dead soldiers were decorated.

VIGILANTE EDITOR LIBEL CASE OPENS IN LONDON COURT

(Republican A. P. Leased Wire)

LONDON, May 30.—Noel Pemberton-Billing, member of parliament for East Hertfordshire and publisher of the newspaper Vigilante, opened his defense in his trial in the Bow street police court today on the charge of libeling Maud Allan, dancer, and J. T. Grein, manager of the Independent theater. Mrs. Villiers Stewart was called to testify to the existence of a book which Pemberton-Billing said had been prepared by German secret agents, containing the names of 47,000 British persons alleged to be addicted to vice and held in bondage to Germany through fear of exposure.

Mrs. Stewart, under examination by Mr. Pemberton-Billing, said the book, which she had seen, but was not produced, contained the names of Viscount Asquith and Mrs. Asquith, Viscount Haldane, former secretary for war, and Justice Darling, who is trying the case against the member of parliament.

Another witness, Capt. Harold Spencer, said he was shown the book by Prince William of Wales in Albania. He said he did not remember seeing Mr. Asquith's name in it, but declared the names of Mrs. Asquith and Viscount Haldane were there.

Threats Are Alleged
Both Captain Spencer and Mrs. Stewart said they had been threatened, the former after he had communicated the fact to the authorities, and Mr. Pemberton-Billing asked the judge for protection for himself and his witness. The judge referred him to the chief commissioner of police.

Captain Spencer, before giving the names of Asquith and Viscount Haldane, said he would give only the names of those who had been approached and had succumbed to German temptation. He had placed the information before the foreign office and the war office and the admiralty.

"There was great political pressure brought to bear," said the witness, "and I was told that if it were published it would undermine the whole fabric of the government. I then took it to the political machine."

Captain Spencer declared that pressure had been brought to bear to suppress the matter in September, 1917, when a "political crisis" was on, and they were trying to bring Asquith back to power.

Mr. Pemberton-Billing explained that his object in citing them was to show the existence of the book of names was to prove the existence of the "cui" referred to in the alleged libel and its political significance.

Continuing his testimony, Captain Spencer who was a member of the Internationale Gendarmier in Albania before the war and aide-de-camp to Prince William of Wales, said he was a member of the royal air force, and is now a full corps of officers for the Tenth and Eighth street schools. Miss Alta Fogal, who was elected, and the other girls filled are, Miss Bonnie Biehl, the

Society Woman Named
One of the principal messengers, he learned from persons who had reported to the intelligence department, was a well known English society woman, Mrs. George Keppel. He had seen Mrs. Keppel come back from Holland.

Captain Spencer was ultimately passed out of the district corps physically unfit. Under cross-examination he said he had never been in the secret service. He was born in America and had never been naturalized in England.

In the German book to which he had referred there was a note after each name indicating the particular way in which the person could best be approached.
